

Key Insights from dashboards

1

Csat by sentiments
Negative sentiments dominate
Customers are more dissatisfied than satisfied
Positive experiences exist, but they are much fewer

The sentiment-wise CSAT analysis shows that a large portion of customers fall under Negative and Very Negative categories. This indicates that customer dissatisfaction is more prominent than satisfaction, highlighting potential issues in service quality, delivery, or resolution time.

3

Csat by Response time
-----------------------	--

SLA compliance is generally strong
However, delayed responses still impact a large customer base. These delayed cases likely contribute to negative CSAT scores

The response-time analysis shows that while the majority of cases are resolved within SLA, a considerable number of interactions fall below or above SLA, which may be a key driver of customer dissatisfaction

2

Csat by Channels

Customers prefer human interaction

Call Center is likely handling more complex or escalated issues

High volume may also mean long wait

The channel-wise CSAT analysis shows that the Call Center handles the highest number of customer interactions, indicating that customers still rely heavily on human support for issue resolution. Chatbot and Email follow, suggesting opportunities to improve self-service channels.

4

Csat by Call centers

The average CSAT across call centers is fairly consistent, indicating standardized service quality and no major location-specific performance gaps

Problem Statement

Decline in customer retention

Analyze customer service impact

Key Findings

Calls above SLA → lower CSAT

Negative sentiment → lowest CSAT

Chatbot has lower CSAT than Call-Center

Certain call centers underperform

Improve SLA adherence

Better training for negative sentiment handling

Optimize chatbot or shift complex issues to agents

What should Flipkart do?

Focus on reducing Below/Above SLA cases

Improve workforce planning during peak loads

Automate low-complexity issues to reduce response delays

Monitor SLA breaches in real time

While service quality is consistent across call centers, delays in response time remain a major contributor to customer dissatisfaction, highlighting SLA compliance as the primary improvement opportunity. Customer dissatisfaction is more